

College Here I Come

10 0 1

Chapter 1 by Madison Flanagan

You throw your hat into the air and you know that you are taking your first step into adulthood. You have no idea what to do for college, and you need to apply soon. You haven't sent any applications in and you may not have a chance to get in. Let's rewind. You are now back in 5th grade. You may think that it's crazy to think about college now, but you should start now. If you follow these effortless steps, consequently, you will have a chance to get accepted by a college. This thought may come to mind, "I'm only ten, what can I do for college?" In fact you can accomplish many things. One important thing that you can do is set goals for yourself. To help yourself set goals you can research many colleges that may fit what you want to do for a career. Another thing that you can achieve is learning everything you want to know. One way that you can learn these things is by studying these new things with your parents or by yourself. If you learn everything you want to know, you can use everything in the rest of your grades and throughout life.

Something else that you can carry out is to work hard in everything you do. If you work hard in extracurricular activities or in school, you will achieve great things. One thing that you can do to work hard is to use the best of your ability in each thing you do! This will give you an advantage because you will be taking your time and you will be checking over your work. You can also pay attention in class so you can learn new things. If you learn new things you will be able to apply that in every subject. If you need help on a topic, ask someone for help. When you ask someone for help you will receive one on one consultation. This will help you understand the concept better and you will feel more confident in that subject.

One more thing you can do is take private classes in advanced subjects that you aren't learning
